Market Commentary

Global markets enjoyed another strong recovery month during July as continued optimism for a COVID-19 vaccine, potential additional stimulus, and better-than-expected quarterly corporate earnings in the US bolstered investor sentiment.

U.S. Equities were positive for the fourth straight month, pushing the year-to-date return into positive territory. This strong market recovery comes despite a record spike in infection rates across many parts of the U.S. and prolonged economic impact on the economy.

Unemployment in the United States ticked lower during July having added 1.8 million jobs in the month. The unemployment rate fell nearly 1%, to 10.2% by the end of the July.

Manufacturing in the United States, marked by the ISM Manufacturing PM Index, rose to 54.2 during the month, outpacing market expectations of 53.6. Importantly, this was the highest reading since March 2019 as manufacturing continued its recovery from the economic shutdown experienced earlier in the year.

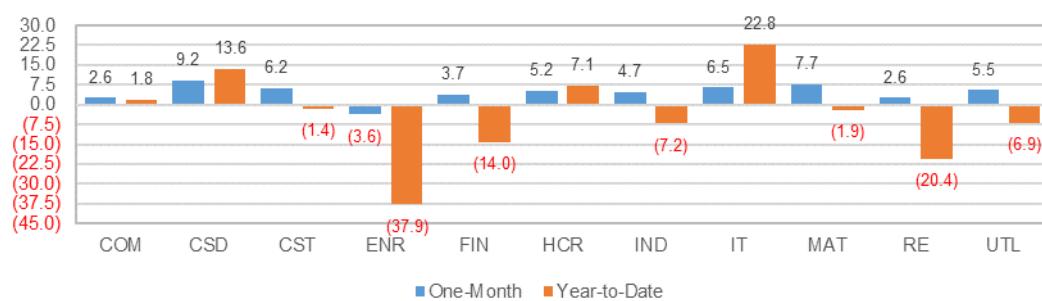

Consumer spending modestly rose during July; however, consumer sentiment ticked lower during the month. The University of Michigan Consumer Sentiment Index fell to 72.5, down from 78.1 during June, while retail sales, a measure of purchases at stores, at restaurants and online, increased by just 1.2% during the month.

During late June and throughout July, many states across the United States began to experience sharp spikes in new COVID-19 infections, forcing nearly all states to pause or reverse some of their economic reopening plans. Despite this, investors remained hopeful for a vaccine, which helped stocks rise higher.

U.S. corporate earnings reports were expected to fall year-over-year by 45%; however, earnings results were much better than market consensus expectations.

Small capitalization stocks trailed large caps during the month, as the Russell 2000 Index returned +2.8% versus +5.9% for the Russell 1000 Index. The Russell Micro Cap Index was up 1.1% for the month.

Growth stocks again led value stocks during July with technology names continuing to lead the market.

Of the eleven major sectors in the index, all, but Energy were positive during July. Year-to-date, four sectors (Communication Services, Consumer Discretionary, Health Care, and Information Technology) are positive.

During July, EM Latin America and EM Asia led the way in terms of regional return, while Japan was down -1.6% during the month.

Market Commentary

The U.S. Treasury yield curve remained depressed during the month across the maturity spectrum. The 10-year Treasury yield ended the month at 0.53%, down 13 bps from June 30, 2020. Following the massive stimulus packages provided to the U.S. economy during March and April, the yield curve has steepened. Bonds in riskier segments of the market have continued to outperform Treasuries, typically a signal of an improving economy.

Credit spreads continued to tighten during the July in both investment grade and non-investment grade fixed income. High yield spreads, which compressed from 1100 bps during March to 626 bps by the end of June, further tightened to 488 bps at July 31, 2020.
